The world could come caving in any second and we still hurt each other, we still create power dynamics. I don't understand it at all. If we don't understand the meaning to life or consciousness, why not figure it the fuck out instead of sitting around, masking our true feelings and desires. I don't want the world to cave in to figure out that it was all for nothing, because at least there is something right now. even if it is the biggest hell imaginable. What am I doing here?

I used to think suicide was
